Alleged Navy spies reveal U.S. secrets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy officials Tuesday an alleged spy ring uncovered over the past three weeks gave the nation "very valuable information" compromised certain communications and equipment as well as operating procedures.

They said the Navy has made changes to interact the damage, and its ships and planes, including submarines carrying nuclear missiles, remain safe.

Navy Secretary John F. Lehman and James D. Watkins, chief of naval operations, said the security breaches had explain significant strides made by the Soviets over the past decade in their own submarines more difficult to find.

Watkins and Lehman offered their first public assessment of the spy ring allegedly led by retired Navy officer John A. Walker Jr., as the Pentagon also announced a series of steps to tighten access to classified material.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger ordered a 10 percent reduction in the number of security clearances for military personnel and civilians working for defense contractors. That number is estimated to be 4.3 million people.

The 10 percent reduction will apply to the 300,000 Navy personnel with clearances, and Lehman said he had set a goal of a 50 percent reduction "as soon as feasible."

Watkins said the Soviets "gained information that would let them better understand what they observed" about U.S. tactics and operations, calling that "very valuable information." But he said that "much of the information is perishable" and old.

In other developments, Pamela K. Carroll, girlfriend of John Walker Jr., said she knew nothing of Walker's alleged spying and contended she was unfairly fired from her job as a Norfolk, Va., policewoman because of her ties to him. She was dismissed Monday, eight days short of the end of her one-year probationary period.

She said she has cooperated with authorities and testified before a federal grand jury.

In West Dennis, Mass., Barbara Joy Crowley Walker said she is keeping a prison cell for her son, John Walker Jr., who also has been charged with espionage in the case. Mrs. Walker, John Walker's former wife, provided the tip to federal authorities that led to her ex-husband's arrest. She said she never would have gone to the FBI last November if she had known her son was involved.

Walker, in his briefing, said the damage done to national security by the Soviets is the most serious. The Navy assumes some supposedly secure teletype and voice systems have been penetrated by the Soviets.

Walker and three other men — including his brother and son — have so far been arrested and charged with espionage in the case. FBI and Pentagon officials have said they believe the ring was operating for as long as 20 years.

Watkins and three other men — including his brother and son — have so far been arrested and charged with espionage in the case. FBI and Pentagon officials have said they believe the ring was operating for as long as 20 years.

The change between Olsen and board members became heated when Olsen said "the district's public relations on the investment situation was lousy."

Board members finished the evening's approval process by voting a .24 mill increase to cover the cost of collecting taxes assessed them by the county. The district will be charged an extra $280,000 this year for tax collection.

Alpine budget okayed

Utah Taxpayers Association unhappy with levy

School Board officials Tuesday night gave final approval to the district's 1985-86 budget amid criticism that it is not fair to distract taxpayers.

Speaking for the Utah Taxpayers Association, Jack Olsen said as concerned about the fact that the district chose not to pass state-mandated reduction in property taxes to district taxers. The legislature just this year lowered the state basic levy by 1 mill.

Knowing that most taxpayers would be unaware of the levy cut, some districts have proposed to absorb the levy by increasing other taxes," Olsen said.

Alpine's levy increases in transportation and recreation were to the 90 figure.

The outcome of the past levvy vote demonstrates a ground of taxpayer protest, Olsen continued.

BYU for Africa' proposed s next year's fundraiser

HEATHER EBELING

One fundraiser per year can be saved for ASBYU, in part because students attending BYU are being supported by their parents and don't have to give to such programs, John Sorenson, BYU's advisor told the executive council Tuesday.

Elley Burnette, Organizations vice president, proposed that "BYU For Africa" this year's ASBYU fund raising would make ASBYU look good in the eyes of the public. It would also start ASBYU out on the right foot, instead of always starting off every year on the wrong foot," Burnette said.

In further business, the executive council ratified Wayne Williams, a junior from Front Royal, Va., as the political editor of the Honors Student Defender for BYU's judicial system. Williams has been involved with the judicial system since May of 1984.

Appointments as Supreme Court permanent judges were ratified by the executive council. After lengthy debate, Scott Wilkinson, a junior from Stockton, Calif., majored in political science, was appointed to the bench. The 6-1 decision was unanimous. Kent Larsen, a junior from Washington, D.C., majoring in Portuguese and accounting, was unanimously approved.

Mike Vanchari, redevelopment technician for the Provo City Council, presented the executive council with a proposal for ASBYU to help with "Operation Face Lift" July 15-20. It is a mass community effort to work together rebuilding and fixing up the central business district in downtown Provo.

Vanchari hopes to reach the goal of 50 projects for Operation Face Lift. He asked the executive council to organize clubs and groups to help with the city's project.

Cubs and service organizations are to be used to organize clubs for this project. All volunteers will get free T-shirts. The five largest groups will receive free passes to the Veteran's Memorial Pool for an evening. In addition, the group with the most volunteers will get a $200 cash prize.

The themes that were proposed last week at the new school year were rejected because "they don't express what a government or do they express what we want to say," said Chris Doughy, ASBYU president. The council is still seeking creative ideas, which it will vote on at the next executive meeting.

The council has tentatively scheduled a pancake breakfast for the last day of classes, pending approval from the administration.

Capital punishment bill goes to taxpayers

ESLIE M. GANDOLA

Reporter

Editor's note: This is the second part of a two-part series on capital punishment. Part II details the execution of a capital punishment case can generate and some costs of the Ron Lafferty trial.

Right as individual budgets may seem, it is both the steepest and the richest of Utah taxpayers who are financing supporting Ron Lafferty's fight to live. Cities, counties and federal agencies have all been hit up for that amount to big bucks.

Ron Lafferty was pronounced guilty May 2 of the slaying double murder of his brother's wife and 15-month-old daughter. He was sentenced to die on July 2 but that sentence is being, and will be fought, with as many appeals and through as many loopholes as Utah law will allow.

"Any time you have a large number of these kinds of cases . . . that's the very essence of the reason for having increased taxes," said Elwood Sundberg, Utah County auditor. "That's something that we've had to live with over the years with the increasing costs of these sensational cases," he said.

Sundberg said it is hard to tell if taxes would be affected by Lafferty's case. "It certainly has an impact on the total budget," he said.

Costs in American Fork, where the murders took place, indirectly paid approximately $10,500 the week after the victims were found for the investigation under way by the American Fork Police Department.

Expenses for the first month of the investigation rose to almost $30,000, according to figures U.S. Chief Randy Johnson said were modest.

In addition to the investigative costs, Lafferty worked up to $1,000 in court-appointed attorneys' services. The public defender office requested $15,000 for the Lafferty case, on top of the sum for their annual contract.

Originally, Lafferty and his co-conspirator and brother Dan Lafferty were scheduled for a joint trial. When the trials were severed, Ron Lafferty was assigned a new attorney and the amount needed practically doubled the $15,000 request, said Mike Espin, public defender.

Attorney fees are normally an expected expense. However, this bill, however, are the extraordinary costs of capital cases, competency examinations and constant high security.

The notoriety associated with the case enhanced the need for security apparently, Bateman said. "There was an awful lot of outrage associated with it (the case)," he said.

The amount of security and rules to be enforced were determined through a meeting of the prosecutor, judge and Bateman. The sheriff's office, whose budget comes from the county, has estimated Ron Lafferty's security cost at $38,310.

Competency examinations of varying levels of intensity were conducted on Lafferty in four different occasions, involving several psychiatrists and psychologists.

Lafferty's determination of competency and treatments cost the county nearly $15,000 in 1985 for his approximately four-month hospital stay. That figure doesn't include previous examinations ordered by the court or evaluations and costs associated with DNA testing.

"It would have been cheaper to have put him up in the Hilton," said Brent Bullock, administrative assistant in the Utah County Attorney's office. (Ironically, 4th District Judge J. Robert Bullock ruled contrary to the findings of the state-appointed doctors.)

A bill discussed and defeated in this year's legislative session considered transferring the costs incurred with competency evaluations and hospitalization from the coun-

Son says father is dead, Israelis say he's alive

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Josef Mengele's son broke years of family silence Tuesday to say his father is dead and that he "has no doubt" the infamous Nazi doctor of Auschwitz was buried in a barrel in a Brazilian grave.

"I am certain that the medical investigation will prove this shortly," Rolf Mengele, 41, said.

He said he learned the circumstances of his father's death from a newspaper clipping in 1976, the year the corpse was unearthed last Thursday was buried at Embu, 17 miles from São Paulo, Brazil.

"All victims of Josef Mengele and their relatives have my and our family's deepest sympathy," he said.

Josef Mengele is accused of sending up to 400,000 people to gas chambers, and performed ghoulish medical "experiments" at the Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland.

Rolf Mengele said the family is prepared to furnish evidence of the death, adding:

"I have been silent until now out of consideration for the people who had contact with my father in the last 30 years."

Israelis involved in investigating Nazi war crimes said they did not believe the claim that Mengele is dead.

"This is just a very elegant way to move away from public interest in a matter which is not too pleasant for them (the family)," said Gideon Hausner, the prosecutor of Nazi criminal Adolf Eichmann.

Justice Ministry spokesman Yitzhak Feinberg said, "At present, Israel will continue in its efforts to track Mengele in order to bring him to justice to Israel."

For example, 75 to 100 FBI agents two out of 20 field offices in 19 states spent approximately two weeks on the case before Lafferty's apprehension, according to Terry Knowles, special agent in the Salt Lake City office. During those weeks, some agents worked 16-hour days in what Knowles called "a textbook case, just where everything seemed to go well."

The highway patrol even donated time to help out on the case, said Brent Bullock. "We're taking thousands of hours," he said.

In addition to supporting the defense expenses, the county also paid for the prosecution and some court costs. Wayne Watson, chief prosecutor in Lafferty's case, estimated the costs incurred to the county as "astronomical."

Experts' testimonies cost the county $5,400 for Ron Lafferty's trial alone. Travel expenses for witnesses hit $3,300 while juror and witness fees topped $2,500.

Holiday costs accrued by the Lafferty murders were approximately at other levels of $1,000.

For example, 75 to 100 FBI agents two out of 20 field offices in 19 states spent approximately two weeks on the case before Lafferty's apprehension, according to Terry Knowles, special agent in the Salt Lake City office. The highway patrol even donated time to help out on the case, said Brent Bullock. "We're taking thousands of hours," he said.

"It represents a lot of people and people represent time and time represents money," said Sundberg.

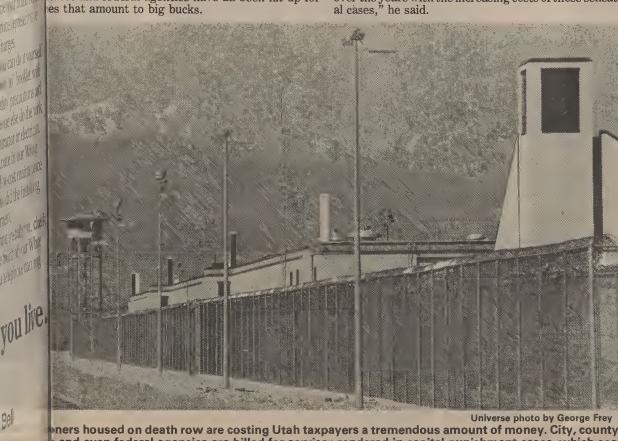

And the expenses are on the increase.

There is even a cost to actually imposing the death sentence. In Gary Gilmore's 1977 execution, the only execution in Utah in nearly 25 years, expenses were incurred for a special lock-down throughout the prison, extra security, which included escorting the condemned to the gallows.

"It's a tremendous amount of money," said Sundberg.

"Our criminal justice system is not cheap, that's the bottom line," said Dan Price, 4th District Court administrator.

"Fines are expensive and we pay heavily for the presumption of innocence but for the most part it's worth it," he said.

Prisoners housed on death row are costing Utah taxpayers a tremendous amount of money. City, county, and even federal agencies are billed for services rendered in capital punishment cases, which cost thousands of dollars.

Recruits plus spring practice strengthen BYU volleyball team

By MELANIE MARTIN

University Sports Writer

Two defending champions will have their titles on the line the weekend of Sept. 5. UCLL will not only play the Cougars in football, but the Bruins' defending women's volleyball champion will also be in town to tackle the BYU women's volleyball team.

Although the volleyball team does not start play for another three months, it has been practicing all spring getting ready for the season. According to coach Elaine Michaelis, spring practice for the team is optional.

"We have had about 10 or 12 girls practicing with us at various times, and the team has made great progress," Michaelis said.

Some schools have a spring competitive season, but BYU has not opted to do this, Michaelis said, because of the cost and earlier loss of eligibility for some players.

Michaelis has been coaching at BYU for about 23 years. She began with sports day competition, and when volleyball became an inter-collegiate competition she became the coach for basketball and volleyball. Seven years ago she began concentrating solely on coaching volleyball.

Last year, while leading the nation in assists per game, the team was ranked 15th by both the NCAA poll and the Collegiate Volleyball Coaches Association poll. According to Michaelis, it is not unusual for the Cougars to be ranked in the Top 20 or the Top 10.

"We have mostly been a Top-10 team and I think with the recruits and returning players we can be up there again," Michaelis said.

Racelyn Hoglund, one of last year's graduating players, made the national volleyball team which, Michaelis says, qualifies her as one of the top-15 players in the country.

Michaelis said she is excited about the team's chances this season. She said there are several lettermen returning and some good new recruits. One of the strongest aspects of this year's team is the redshirt players who will be activated for the season.

A total of three redshirts will be activated including Dylann Duncan, who will be a sophomore. "Dylann has made more progress than anyone during spring practice and is a fun player to have," said Michaelis.

Be West and Diane Cattani redshifted last year and will return as freshmen. According to Michaelis, all of these girls should greatly aid the team.

Two recruits from Finland will also join the team when practice begins in August. Mari-Joisa Salmi and Sari Virtanen will be playing on the Finnish national team.

"Both of these girls are mature athletes, and although they only have two and three years of eligibility left, they will be of immediate help for the Cougars," Michaelis said.

Another recruit, Jill Sanders from

Salt Lake City, was a real battle for BYU to get because she was being recruited by several other schools. Michaelis said Sanders is a real hitter and is close to being ready to start her freshman year.

One of the returning lettermen, senior Tami Hamilton, has been granted one more season with the Cougars, but will not be able to join them until October because she is having a baby.

"I think by mid-season with the help of Tami the team will be even stronger," Michaelis said.

Michaelis said returning players should make the team strong defensively. Juniors Vonda Skousen and Corinne Russell are defensive specialists and exciting players to watch.

Other players to watch this season are Socorro Leal, a junior; Katie Barnes, a junior college transfer; Vicki Backus, a sophomore; and sophomore Kathy Barnes.

Y men's golf team invited to compete in Fall Classic

Amateur golf tournaments during the summer will keep the University's golf team busy and in shape for the upcoming season, according to the team's golf coach, Karl Tucson.

The Cougars, who were ranked 14th at the end of this season, have been invited to participate in the Fall College Golf Classic in Coral Springs, Fla., which is sponsored by Honda, is an elite collegiate tournament.

Automatic invitations were extended to the teams who finished in the Top 10 during the NCAAs. BYU was one of five schools selected. The Cougars' selection was based on performance in big tournaments, geographic representation and strength of its returning team.

"Even though this past season was frustrating, it's nice to know all of the credibility we have earned over the years comes back to us in the form of these types of invitations which display confidence in us for the future," said Tucson.

Several of the team members will play in tournaments throughout the summer including the Canadian Open, the Western Amateur, the Pacific Coast Amateur and the U.S. Amateur.

Herschel Walker sets professional rushing record

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Now that the distraction of breaking Eric Dickerson's pro football single-season rushing record is over, Herschel Walker says the New Jersey Generals do not want to repeat it by winning the United States Football League title.

Walker surpassed Dickerson's record on Monday night as he gained 162 yards and scored two touchdowns in leading New Jersey to a 31-24 victory over the Jacksonville Bulls.

Walker's season total now stands at 2,129 yards, tying the NFL record of 2,105, set last season by Dickerson of the National Football League's Los Angeles Rams.

Padres' Garvey leads in early All-Star voting

NEW YORK (AP) — First baseman Steve Garvey of the San Diego Padres is leading the early balloting for the 1985 National League All-Star team, according to figures released by Major League Baseball.

Garvey and outfielder Dale Murphy of Atlanta were the overall leaders, each with over 300,000 votes.

Local fishing outlook bright

Editor's note: This is the first in a two-part series on local fishing and camping. Part one details local fishing spots and part two will discuss camping.

"There's nothing to do on the weekend" is getting to be an old cliché. Well, grab your fishing pole and sleeping bag and head for the hills, because the summer fishing and camping season is here.

Fishing does not make for a cheap date if you don't already have your own tackle, but after the initial investment in a rod, reel and other essentials, fishing can provide many memorable experiences. Imagine being able to show your friends the big one that didn't get away.

Of course, a license is required which costs residents $10 for the entire year and non-residents $15. For BYU students who believe they have been in the state for 60 days or more are eligible to purchase a resident license. There are also one-day and five-day licenses available for those who don't want the full-season license.

"Our position is the same as before," said Smith, who earlier announced that Wiggins would not rejoin the team this season. "We're not going to do anything different. Nothing has changed. I don't think the Joint Review Council has any authority over the situation."

Asked about Wiggins' status after this season, Smith said: "I don't see him coming back at all."

The Joint Review Council, made up of three doctors knowledgeable about drug abuse and set up by major league baseball's Joint Drug Agreement last year, met here Monday to determine whether Wiggins was medically able to return to work.

A favorite fishing spot for many people from the Provo area is Strawberry Reservoir located 52 miles east of Provo. Rainbow trout are the main fare and fishing is expected to be good this year. Boat rentals are available at the marina and camping spots are plentiful.

Another spot near Provo is Deer Creek Reservoir near Heber City. Deer Creek offers a wide variety of fishing including perch, bass, rainbow and brown trout. Fishing has been good this year with bass fishermen doing well on the west banks using rubber worms. Boat ramps and camping spots are available.

The Provo River above and below the Deer Creek Reservoir is good for both brown and rainbow trout, but access to the river is often over private property with landowner permission required. Fishing is expected to be good this year, improving as the summer goes on.

Men take to female fashions

By JENNIFER J. JOHNSON

University Staff Writer

Fashion experts' predictions have finally come to pass: the unisex trend in clothing is here and has been firmly established.

The result of this "genderless" style is a flux of men shopping in traditionally female clothing stores.

The manager of a local women's clothing store, Alayne Jeffs, said men have been frequenting her store more recently.

"It began when they started buying the big 'belo-pocket' pant (billowy cotton pants with large pockets); then came the big baggy shirts; now they buy pretty much everything."

Jeffs guesses men started frequenting her store after one popular man in town became a regular.

customer

"People started asking him where he got his clothes," she said. "It was then just a case of word of mouth."

Jeffs also considers the new-wave influence of music a factor motivating men to shop for clothing sometimes only women's stores can provide.

"Rock stars dress pretty much the same whether they are male or female," she said. Jeffs compared the similarities in dress of music personalities like Madonna and Billy Idol to back up her opinion.

"I think it's because they're trying to look good in their store," Jeffs said. "At first it was kind of weird to see guys in here, but now we've gotten used to it."

Jeffs definitely has "gotten used to it." Sometimes her store has more male shoppers than female shoppers.

But Jeffs said she does not cater to the male market. "Right now the styles are a lot more casual, so either a girl or a guy can put them on. The styles don't look specifically like they were designed for a girl. Guys will continue to shop here, but we don't consider them in our buying for the store."

Men who shop at Jeffs's store do not think the clothing they buy is peculiarly female in nature.

"There is no place to shop for fun clothes for guys," said John Grenawalt, a BYU senior. "The girls' clothing is much more up to date."

Fellow shopper Bill Scott agrees. "The girls' clothing is very popular right now with fashion than the stuff guys could buy in Utah."

Also a senior, Scott is studying fashion design and plans on working in retail for a while after graduation. He said today's women's clothing is flattering to both the female and male shape.

"Some of the clothes look even better on guys than on girls," he said.

'Doonesbury' temporarily cut

NEW YORK (AP) — Legal concerns and fairness were among the reasons some newspapers decided not to run this week's "Doonesbury" comic strip, featuring a scathing look at Frank Sinatra and his alleged organized crime connections. "I just had a lot of objections to it on fairness and accuracy," said Robert Landau, editorial page editor of the San Jose, Calif., Post-News-Gazette. "One particular point was libelous. I just decided that's not the way we want to make our living."

"I like the atmosphere of a small hospital better. The care and attention are more personalized; they treated me as if I were the only one to have a baby there. The nurses were considerate and friendly and I loved the food. Five of my sisters go to Mountain View to have their babies, though only two live close by."

Y to host 'monster concert' in de Jong Concert Hall

There will be a "monster concert" with 30 acts on July 20 at 8 p.m. Thursday at the de Jong Concert Hall.

The concert is part of the third annual Western States Piano Pedagogy Seminar for teachers and students. It began Tuesday and will continue through Friday. Players in the concert will be chosen from the seminar, and will range in age from 5 to adult.

"We'll have 600 fingers playing at the same time," said Dr. Paul Poller, the BYU faculty member who designed the musical instrument. "The concert will give pianists a similar experience than a violinist or a singer, for example, gets by being in an orchestra or chorus."

Some selections planned for the concert are arrangements of Baroque dances, jazz pieces, patriotic-flavored compositions and the "William Tell Overture." BYU professor Mack Wilberg will be the conductor.

ASBY...WHO?

Dear Students, Faculty, and Administration:

In talking to a lot of you, we have found that many feel that ASBYU is not worth its cost because it influences a relatively select few, and promotes short-sightedness.

We feel that many great leaders will come from our university and play an important role in fulfilling the mission of our university and Government to reach its potential, however, we need your input and involvement. If you have suggestions or would like to gain some out-of-class internship experience, come by the Step Down Lounge in the ELWC Wednesday and Thursday, or call us at 378-3901.

ASBYU is changing for the better.

We're excited to make some long-term changes that will bring more and better programs and help make BYU a little bit better.

Sincerely,

The ASBYU Staff
